

We first signed up for the "Do Not Call List" last winter and it made life so much better. No calls at all times of the day, some with a telemarketer on the other end and some those annoying calls where they already have someone else on the line and so you waste your time answering a phone call with no one on the other end. We recently moved into a new house and have written to change our phone number on the list and are waiting for that to take effect. In the meantime we have gotten a huge increase of the number of nuisance calls that we receive. This goes to show what an excellent job the present do not call list does of making sure that you don't get unwanted solicitations. Any program that lessens the restraints put on callers or lessens the service in any way is not an idea that I like. Please let us keep the peace and quiet that the present system afford us.
